Introduction @media method

The third method we're going to look at is @media rules. Here's an example CSS file:

```
body { color: green; }

@media print
{
    body { color: blue; }
```

We have two rules, both of them specify the color of the body. @media rules allow us to bundle up a whole series of CSS rules and apply different criteria to them. In this case we have the rule would only be applied by devices that are print-based. You can leave off the media type, and that defaults to the equivalent of all.

Exercise

For this exercise,we're going to write a @media rule straight into our styles.css file:

```
@media screen, print
{
    body { color: red; }
}
```
