Page Template

So remembering again that WordPress is blog first you have to set it up on the back end for a page to load first as the home page. If not then the blog is the home page and then you will access the pages through their urls.

index.php

So if you have no other files then the `index.php` will be used as the page template for any pages that you have.

So you would want to create a `page.php` file to theme any pages that are created in the admin area. So let's create a test page and see how our `page.php` will interact with this.
